

Outreach

We still would like the worksheets tested by the DLC.

- 1) I would suggest we ask them to test the first sheet of each topic, once before Christmas as a minimum. By excluding the second sheet we can print out the sheets and remove the need for internet access. In fact the students could do the worksheets on site after or before their visit around the centre. In theory two groups in one day and we could have our test phase completed, finally!
- 2) Education Scotland are great and keen to promote our work. The problem with the worksheets is that they are too old fashioned, current education practises are less proscriptive. Basically the first page of each worksheet should be only the letters. The second page should be 'learner journeys':
 - What areas or topics are covered in each letter?
 - Where would a teacher use the letters? What are the experiences and outcomes expected?
 - Examples of learning? This is where we would offer the previously created questions as examples of what teachers could do.

3) Things to discuss, things to find out.

Activities and current stimulus, here would be where we put the links to other organisations such as the NLS, Oxfam, Bill and Melinda Gates foundation.

Above I have attached the link of the current DL section of Education Scotland to give an example of the learner journeys they are looking for, for each topic.

- 4) I can create the learner journeys over the Christmas break, completed by the 7th of January. Follow up meeting with Education Scotland in the same month.
- 5) Once we have got the feedback from the DLC we can finish off the outreach and begin to write up our report. We have a definite agreement of involvement from Education Scotland so we can include that in our report, then it's just a matter of them linking to our new website

...and...in theory...we're done with the creation process by the 30th of January!
